

October 26, 2007

Teen's Charitable Halloween Effort Gets Boost from Broder Law Group

A Mullica Hill teen's ambition to help children in need got an all-important gift from Broder Law Group just in time for Halloween. The firm donated 600 plastic bags that Sal Dragone filled and distributed to kids who wouldn't be able to make the rounds on one of the most anticipated youth holidays of the year.

Sal, 13, marked his sixth year of passing out Healing Hearts on Halloween bags. He solicits cash donations and delightful goodies from area merchants, then stuffs bags full of fun. Then he hand-delivers them to area hospitals and other places where kids of trick-or-treating age won't be able to participate in that age-old activity.

"Sal is setting a warm-hearted example for everyone by thinking of children in need," said firm founder Seth Broder. "We were happy to support him in that endeavor."

Sal's Healing Hearts bags are loaded with reading, coloring, and activity books, crayons, masks and small toys. They help occupy children while they're unable to enjoy all that Halloween has to offer.

Find out more about Sal's efforts online at www.HealingHeartsOnHalloween.org.

#